This series includes files related to the Metropolitan Museum's participation in the Cultural Institutions Group. Formed in 1869, the Cultural Institutions Group consists of representatives from privately endowed New York City cultural institutions that receive public funding, termed quasi-public institutions. The organization shares information on and lobbies for continued funding and benefits coverage from the City, including participation in city-operated pension plans for their employees. At this time, the Group consisted of representatives from the American Museum of Natural History, Brooklyn Academy of Music, Brooklyn Botanic Garden, The Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, the Brooklyn Museum, Children's Museum Brooklyn, The Metropolitan Museum of Art, The Museum of the City of New York, New York Aquarium, the New York Botanical Garden, the New York Public Library, New York Zoological Society, Staten Island Institute of Arts and Sciences, the Staten Island Museum, and the Staten Island Zoological Society.

Also included are files documenting the Munsey Park residential real estate development. When millionaire investor, real estate speculator, and newspaper owner Frank A. Munsey died in 1925, the greater part of his estate, with a final value of close to ten million dollars, was left to The Metropolitan Museum of Art. It was the largest monetary gift to date that the Museum had received. The estate included ownership of the Sun-Herald newspaper, The Mohican Stores grocery chain, and real estate holdings in Manhasset, NY, on the north shore of Long Island. Under the leadership of Museum President Robert DeForest, the Metropolitan Museum developed part of the land into a planned residential community called Munsey Park. It featured Colonial-style houses and streets named after American artists. The community's first model home opened in 1928. By 1950 the Museum had sold the Munsey real estate interests to other developers, realizing an estimated four million dollars from these transactions.
